Re: In re: National Football League Players' Concussion Injury Litigation,
Nos. 18-2225, 18-2249, 18-2253, 18-2281, 18-2332

Dear Ms. Dodszuweit,

I represent Alan Faneca, Roderick “Rock” Cartwright, Jeff Rohrer, and Sean Considine (the “Faneca Objectors”) in connection with the above-captioned appeals. Appellants in these appeals seek review of the district court’s order allocating common-benefit attorneys’ fees in connection with the class settlement in this case.<sup>1</sup> The district court’s order awarded the Faneca Objectors’ counsel $350,000 “[i]n consideration of the service provided as liaison counsel and the firms’ role in providing benefits to the class.” Dist. Ct. Dkt. 10019 at 23.

The Faneca Objectors also plan to appeal the district court’s decision, challenging the $350,000 attorneys’ fees award to them as inadequate. Nonetheless, to the extent Appellants in these cases challenge the district court’s ruling that the Faneca Objectors are entitled to fees, the Faneca Objectors will seek to participate in these appeals as appellees to defend that aspect of the judgment below. If the opening brief in any case does not raise any issue implicating the Faneca Objectors or otherwise necessitating their participation in any one of these appeals, the Faneca Objectors will notify the Court that they do not intend to file an appellee’s brief in that appeal.

Respectfully,

/s/ Steven F. Molo
